The Vasantha Mahal, Mysore, India
March 31, 1959

Dear Sanford:

We have your letter of March 25 and thank you for your prompt response. I'm glad to see you talked to Harper's - I have now followed up with a letter to Frank MacGregor, including background material - a copy is enclosed for you. I am passing along your letter to me to Arthur Goodfriend, along with carbons of this correspondence, so he can tell we are doing some work!

Meanwhile, a copy of HH's first book, DATTATREYA , published by Allen and Unwin, has been sent off to you. It is a much more difficult book than the AESTHETICS one, as you will see - but it is important because it contains new material and new thinking. It has sold very well here and in England.

His Highness will have various other manuscripts with him. Pry them out of him, for a look.

I am enclosing a copy of my letter to Tom Yoseloff of Beechhurst Press and the University of Pennsylvania Press re all this. He may be helpful to you.

Instead of going to Coonoor as I had thought I might, it now turns out I am to go to HH's Fernhill Palace at Ootacamund in the Nilgiris, with his mother, the Yuvarani, his wife, the Maharani, and the children. I will work there on my book until his return here - at which point we will review the American trip together in the light of his expanding international interests and literary work. After that, there is a meeting of the International Institute of Philosophy here at the University of Mysore, at which it appears I can be useful, so I am likely to be here until sometime in September. The address above will reach me unless I give you another. I shall get at my writing with a vim the minute I get to Fernhill late in April and will be sending you some things in due time.

So you have a memory of me in the back of your skull? You may be giving your age away by that admission. I was one of the founders of the Public Relations Society of America and also of the Publicity Club of New York. I gave all that up when I started Public Interest, Inc. and became a non-propagandist. My late husband was Lionel Calhoun Moise, who was Assistant Editor of the American Weekly (he made the transition to the tabloid size when the Weekly was a serious sheet using big-name writers) and Editor of the Hearst Pre-date Service atthe time of his death in 1952. He was one of the old group of famous USA newsmen - Russel Crouse, Stanley Walker, Walter Howey, etc. about whom a lot of books have been written. Lionel, who was 22 years older than I, was one of the men who trained Ernest Hemingway on the old Kansas City Star. Maybe some of this will help you place me.

Please keep me posted and let me have all details when you and HH have met, as to the books situation.

Cordial regards,

Julie Medlock
